

Holistic Services & Flexible Engagement

Collections

- Unique databases
- Legacy servers
- Cloud-based software & collaboration tools
- Social media

Document Review and Hosting

- Platform-agnostic document review
- Secure remote review
- Host data in RelativityOne
- Data breach response: analyze compromised databases for PII and PHI, develop required disclosure programs

Consulting

- Legal hold administration
- Custodian surveys and interviews
- Discovery motion drafting and advising
- Meet and confer process
- TAR workflows
- Expert testimony
- Document retention and defensible destruction policies

Engagement Models

Transactional, project-based

A la carte engagements spanning all of our services

Fully integrated outsourced eDiscovery department

*Custom agreements based on the depth and breadth of support required, including acting as eDiscovery counsel through our law firm Mattingly Burke
Cohen & Biederman*

Our Story

As litigation attorneys at AmLaw 100 firms in the late 1990s and early 2000s, we spent hundreds of hours traveling to warehouses and corporate conference rooms, hand-coding documents with sticky notes, maintaining families with binder clips, and marking documents with a physical Bates stamp.

By the time we became litigation partners, technology advances meant we were routinely managing cases and discovery projects with exponentially increasing volumes of electronic data. We all had a front-row seat as “discovery” became “eDiscovery,” and we understood that if we were to effectively serve our clients, we had to understand the technology they were adopting.

We focused on the intersection of technology, case law, and effective litigation. Major milestones included leveraging our discovery prowess into notable wins in securities, product liability, and toxic tort litigation, as well as coordinating international discovery for a highly public medical device litigation.

By 2015, we knew that our combined experience in eDiscovery and complex litigation could provide huge value for law firm litigators and their corporate clients. We founded Proteus Discovery Group to make eDiscovery more intuitive, transparent, and affordable.

Our growth has come almost exclusively from word-of-mouth as outside counsel retain and recommend us to peers or clients who need eDiscovery assistance. Today, our clients include AmLaw 100 firms, Fortune 500 corporations, and state and local government agencies.

We’ve come a long way from our days as associates going through bankers boxes in warehouses, and we’re proud that our blend of project management, technology, and legal acumen continue to drive positive outcomes for our clients.

- Ray Biederman, Hamish Cohen, Sean Burke, and Jon Mattingly

Ray Biederman
CEO, Co-Founder

Hamish Cohen
General Counsel, Co-Founder

Jon Mattingly
Director, Co-Founder

Sean Burke
Director, Co-Founder